The COVID-19 pandemic has called for new responses to crisis worldwide. How have governments and people of East Asian countries coped with the current and previous crises, and what strategies have they developed? What are the implications for European societies? In this GEAS Lecture Series, scholars from GEAS and colleagues discuss responses to the current COVID-19 pandemic by East Asian governments and people. All lectures take place online at 12:00 PM (noon), Berlin time (UTC +2).
